BOY RAISED BY FLIES ESCAPES SOUTH BUILDING

WHERE HE HAS BEEN KEPT FOR EXPERIMENTATION PURPOSES SINCE 1974

Administration feel confident they can keep Fly-Boy Scandal secret after recent success with clouding the issue in the notorious Ryckman case.

Ironc twist in bizarre story! Flies presently residing in Beaver Foods Cafeteria, now Spigel Hall, related to those who raised Fly-Boy, abandoned in bread bin at birth by unwed Cafeteria worker.

Path of Fly-Boy's escape was traced by Enquiring photographers on the scene.

Uwe gets nabbed!

Uwe Stoetzel, Blind Duck Pub Manager, is under fire for paying off Mike Lavelle, Erindale's Director of Residences, to keep his anti-alcohol crusade going strong.

Lavelle has put forth a proposal to the Erindale College Council (ECC) for an alcohol free Erindale campus. Due to the increasing costs of his campaign, however, Lavelle was about to renounce his efforts. Enter Stoetzel.

Stoetzel saw his chance to end his problems of drunken pub patrons and pounced upon it. Utilising student funds, Uwe sought to keep the campaign going, but was caught in the act by an insightful student. "I don't know what to say," said Stoetzel.

Campus Police Beat: Shocking Discovery!

by Geoff Scott

Headless Bodiless Corpse found in Library.

Human remains were found in the library this past week. The body was found on the second floor in the rarely used electronics section. There is no telling how long the body had been there, it was nearly totally decomposed. Although they refused official comment the Campus Police admit that they have very few leads to go on. The Peel Police and other experts have been called in. The original hope was to use dental charts to identify the remains, however this has not been possible. Dwayne James, medium II's current photo editor and an archaeology specialist immediately arranged for the tissue to be radio-carbon dated. He also noted the presence of some previously unknown flint tools. James photographed the site extensively, speculating that he may have found 'the missing link.'

Stoetzel is seen here caught in the act as he tries to pass off student funds to a cowering Mike Lavelle in order to fund his 'no alcohol' policy at Erindale College. Fortunately, Stoetzel was caught in the act before any funds could be distributed.

Human Fly?

A human fly was seen scaling the walls of Erindale College earlier this week. The fly was apparently raised within the Erindale Biology department's greenhouse the past seven years and kept alive by being fed Beaver Foods intermittently. "This would account for his incredibly low intelligence levels, as well as the mutations growing on his face and behind," said Professor Charles Brown, a world renowned expert on human flies. "We've sprayed the school with Raid and expect to have him soon," Brown went on to say.

National Guard called in to quell student outbreaks on campus

The National Guard was flown in last week to crush student opposition to administrative control at Erindale.

The Erindale administration has called in the National Guard in order to ruthlessly crush a student revolt on campus.

The revolt began two weeks ago when the Campus Police chased down and ran over two first year Erindale students. According to our sources, the Campus Police feared the youths were stealing their coffee cups and ticket books. This of course sent the Police into a wild frenzy which ended with two students dead.

Students responded to the threat of the Police by automatically storming the Erindale parking lots and taking over all of the parking facilities at the College. Prices are now 50 to 75 cents for students, and $75 per day for administrators.

CREATING A PEACEFUL, GENTLE, AND STRESS-FREE UNIVERSITY

Schools were created, hundreds of years ago, as a test to see how much stress, pressure, and anxiety students could withstand while producing work with some academic, intellectual, or practical value. A kind of Darwinian natural selection process that was initiated by governments, in classical time (Plato's academy was one of the first), to weed out men most fit for employment and rule.

As students, in modern society, we must still partake in this test, but there is at least something we can do to alleviate the artificial stress and anxiety of modern society. We can do something to mitigate the social pressures the feminists movement has placed on men.

In the hunter gather society, the male members of the tribe saw to it that the tribe was provided with enough food and nourishment. In return, the strongest men got first selection of women (presumably, the most beautiful and productive). This simple system freed men from the anxiety and stress of selecting a mate so that they could concentrate on their task of providing their society with food, sustenance, and tools for advancements. In such a society strength was most valuable so those men who were strong got their choice of females.

It is this setup that allowed the rapid progress of society. And it is this relation among the sexes that is natural and consistent with our biological function and purpose. We are primarily biological — operating through a finite number of chemical and electrical reactions and impulses. Thus, the human condition has an optimum efficiency. There is an ideal condition that we should strive for. And, in this condition, it is natural for men to choose his women. It alleviates stress, allows men to concentrate on the task of the day, and fulfills are biological architecture and design.

The changes in society over the last 300 years have gone counter to outer genetic design and has placed an undue amount of stress on men. In the university community this stress is most evident. In addition to the pressures of academics, when a man acquires himself a female, he usually has to go through a slew of unnecessary activates: invite her out, flatter her, subtly let her know that he likes her, spend a lot of time with her, and then try to find out whether she likes him (maybe even take her out on several occasions after they have come to some understanding). There is, however, a means of alleviating the useless stress and pressure of finding a partner without reverting to the somewhat outdated criterion of having those that are strongest select their favorite females.

Physical strength is no longer a character that is in demand in our society. It is no longer strength that makes leaders. And, to make University a much more rewarding experience, we must alleviate the problem by using methods that are consistent with the natural state and progression of mankind. We must allocate females to those men on the basis of intelligence because it is intelligence that is most valuable in our society. Thus, it is knowledge that should be rewarded and freed of the stress of having to find a mate.

The best means of achieving this end is to have a high Council of intellectuals at Canadian universities rate all females on a scale from one to ten. The decision will be based on the girls' appearance in a swimsuit and an evening gown.

In addition, men will also be rated from one to ten. They will be administered a general intelligence test that measures their knowledge of mathematics, the classics, and philosophy. And, on the basis of their score they will be assigned a number. Both the females and the males' number will be printed on their student cards when they enter first year (and on the left hand of all females). This will ensure that everyone can tell the person's level.

The system is simple. And it should work in this manner: Instead of going through the anxiety of finding a suitable mate, the male's only task will be to select someone who has the same or lower rating and show her his student card. She must then decide to go with him. If she refuses, she will be thrown out of all universities in Canada and not allowed to play the game. If there are two men with the same numbers vying for the same female, the one that chooses first will win. In the event of a male wanting a female who is rated higher, it will not be allowed. And, any problems or conflicts in the system will be taken before the Council of Intellectual at each university.

By using this system, everyone will know exactly who they can and can't have. And, there will be no reason for complaints because females will be more than happy with males that are the same level or higher than they are. After all, it is such numbers that will determine how successful the male will be. This will alleviate all the uncertainty and stress from finding a mate. Thus men will be able to concentrate and put all of their energies into intellectual pursuits. In addition, energies once directed to acquiring a particular female will be directed to acquiring knowledge because it is through such that all good things happen.

Vampire in Rez

Dear Editor,

I am a first year student in residence and I have been placed in a house with someone whom I fear might be a vampire. This person sleeps in the day and only comes out at night. But, this is the least of his peculiar traits. He actually howls in the evening. I think I saw him take someone up there who didn't return. Not only that, but it really smell. I think the person might be dead.

Sincerely,
Gordy Doty

Campus Police are vandals

Dear Editor,

I was in the back seat of my camaro last Thursday with my girlfriend while I was parked in parking lot four when I saw the campus police killing a poor deer in what seemed to be some kind of a ritual killing. They separated the head from the rest of the body and spread its blood all over parked cars. They then broke a few windows and left for the South Building where they trashed a few pop machines in the greenery. Men, they really looked mean.

Yours Seriously,

"My boyfriend is a Big Foot"

Dear Editor,

My boyfriend is a Big Foot. I didn't know about this until him and I started making out one night and I began to rub my hands up his shirt. The 'man's' back is full of hair. And I don't mean normal amounts either. His back is like a rain forest. Also, he screams when we are having sex. Anyway, I heard that they have never captured one of these things and I was wondering what kind of a reward could I get if I caught him?

Yours Sincerely,
Katie

An amazing discovery took place in our very own backyard last October.

Dwayne James, an archaeology major at Erindale College discovered the site while searching for evidence of prehistoric occupations along the Port Credit river. If you recall, the river was particularly low last fall, and James was therefore able to discover what appears to be a miniature Stonehenge about 10 feet below the normal water level.

"It's an amazing discovery," James said. "The existence of people no more than two inches tall has been hinted at since the days of Jonathan Swift, but no one has found any evidence of them since then. It is my postulation that the island Gulliver discovered containing the Lilliputian civilization was in fact North America!"

Excavations have been ongoing since before Christmas, but it is slow going. The field crew must work with surgical instruments and magnifying lenses. No detail is too small to be overlooked.

Apparently the news was not released to the press prior to this point so as to keep the Mississauga Golf and Country Club unaware of its location.

The Other Desmond Morton

Desmond Morton, Principal of Erindale College, has been leading a scandalous double-life.

According to witnesses, Morton has frequently been seen at a local sixties bar, drinking and carousing with several younger friends. When asked to explain himself, Morton could only reply "I don't know what to say. I guess I was just afraid to come out of the closet."

ROBOCOP BLASTS C

In a surprise announcement Erindale's administration decided to fire the entire campus police force and take over in the fall. ECC says robot cop can write parking citations faster than any "conventional" officer.

by Rob Botts

In a surprising and carefully worded news release today, Erindale College Council announced that it intends to "replace" the entire Erindale "Police" force with an ultra-modern, super high-tech, state-of-the-art crime fighting device. The subtlety of the news release lapsed only once in the following statement: "The bloody police are doing a shitty job!" Otherwise the ECC was very judicious and discreet concerning the "police." An ECC insider confided with me and explained the decision came after revenues from parking fines were lower than the quarterly projections for the ninth time this year. "Oh, yeah," continued our source, "I think a few of the students are squabbling about safety, too." "The new crime-fighting unit will significantly improve and enhance efficiency and overall performance concerning the fair and equitable dispensation and administration of justice on campus in all respects," said the ECC news release in its typically succinct style.

In high-tech circles Erindale's new "transgression suppression device" is known as the "A.K. 4000," but a spokesman for the consortium working on the "device" says it will be introduced to Erindale students as "Fred." "We felt the trade name may intimidate the students," continues the consortium spokesman. He explains that the "A.K." portion of the name is in deference to the legendary Russian assault rifle, the "A.K. 47," which is known for its deadly accuracy. The "4000" reflects the unit's expected ticketing capacity. "At full tilt," says the spokesman, "he'll issue 4000 tickets an hour."

When asked if the nickname "Fred" was chosen to pay homage to the Fred of Flintstone fame (a figure known and loved by most students), the consortium spokesman was sheepish and simply replied "no." Later, while in the consortium's high-tech, state-of-the-art washroom, I asked the janitor about the unlikely nickname. He said that the ECC requested the name. Fred was the name of Principal Morton's great uncle (twice removed). He was supposedly a renowned metermaid during the depression era. Morton thought that the name would be appropriate, given that the "A.K. 4000's" prime directive would be to issue parking violations.

The consortium (known as CAMCOP, from the contraction of campus cops) which was created solely to work on the "Fred" project is comprised of five companies. All the electronic and computer components for the unit are being developed and supplied by IBM's Canadian division. "Fred's" crime-prevention software is being developed in Lakehead University's "Artificial-intelligence Laboratories and Enterprises, or as the programmers prefer ALE" (one of Peterson's centres of excellence). The main body of the unit is being designed by Suzuki Motor Corporation's robot division located in Tokyo. Mobility will be provided by Germany's Audi. Audi is world renowned for their design and construction of robot components such as electric motor and servos, as well as luxury road sedans. "Fred's" arms will of course be supplied by Canada's very own Spar Aerospace. "Fred's" arms will be just like the ones on the space shuttle, except smaller," says Spar's top engineer on the project.

Each partner in the consortium, of course, brings their own expertise to the project. But they also bring their idiosyncrasies! For instance, the computer scientists at Lakehead's ALE insisted that "Fred's" vocabulary reflect their distinctively Northern culture. Thus, "Fred's" parlance will include such phrases as "take off, eh," and "hoser."

The engineers at Suzuki are also contending with a problem — "Fred's" tendency to tip over while turning corners. "We experience problem before. Center of gravity too high — we fix," was Suzuki's official statement. Rumour has it that Suzuki's robot body division is rife with engineers from the "Samurai" sport-utility truck project.

Audi says all is well with the unit mobility mechanism — except for one small glitch. "Fred" will be standing still exercising a routine ticketing procedure — and then for no reason he bolts off and doesn't stop until he runs into something. Audi insists that "Fred's" "unintended acceleration" is not their fault. An Audi insider told me (off-the-record) that the "unofficial" belief circulating through Audi headquarters is that they suspect the programmers. "There is a rumour that the artificial intelligence computer scientists at Lakehead were drinking Moosehead beer and watching SCTV reruns of "The Great White North" while writing the program," says Claus Volkstrolley, the Enquirer's confidential source at Audi.

Spar has assured Erindale's ECC that they have built "Fred's" arms out of only the strongest materials. If "Fred" were to unexpectedly explode, his arms, if found, would still be intact and functional. A Spar spokesman said this feature is now required in all the arms they build for NASA, and since "Fred's" arms are "just like the ones on the space shuttle, except smaller" the same technology goes into them.

The ECC news release also mentioned that "Fred" will be equipped with a sophisticated weapons system." A person who overheard two friends of a prominent ECC member talking told our friend who told us that since the current Erindale Cops are requesting side arms, the ECC entertained the idea of equipping "Fred" with a small calibre handgun. But then, in light of the recent shooting in nearby public schools, the decision was made. "To be an effective deterrent to the use of armed aggression, and other belligerent acts on campus, 'Fred' will have to have a superior complement of armaments," read the ECC release. Consequently, "Fred" will carry a multi-barreled, rotating, rapid-fire, fully-automated machine gun (like the one Schwarzenegger used in "Predator"). "Should a perpetrator attempt flight, 'Fred's' person-to-person" cruise missile should get the sucker," exclaimed an elated NRA card-carrying member of the ECC.

But, of course, "Fred's" primary directive will be to issue parking violations. To perform this task, a quiver of PaperMate pens will always be on "Fred's" side. "We observed an officer ticketing several vehicles, and we knew a machine like "Fred" could do it faster and better," says the boastful consortium spokesman. "And boy can Fred ticket!"

CAMCOP says "Fred" will not be available until the fall. Until then ECC will have to make due with the present outdated "police." "They are not too bad," says an ECC insider, "but they expect things like holidays, eight hour shifts, and respect — all of which 'Fred' could care less about."

Parking violations will be handled differently with the arrival of the latest campus defence system. No longer will students jeer at the meter monitor.

ECSU Prez's ballet career takes off

by Karen Cain

ECSU President Perry Meeker has recently taken all of Erindale College by surprise in winning the 1990 Royal Ontario Academy of Dance award.

Although Meeker has been fairly prominent on campus in a political sense, not many students have had the privilege of becoming acquainted with his more artistic, sensitive side, which this talented but modest young man has insisted on keeping hidden.

The truth is that Meeker is an avid dancer who has been studying the fine art of ballet ever since the tender age of three, when he was inspired by a Walt Disney animated version of The Nutcracker. Starting from early childhood, Meeker has put in approximately twenty hours a week of lessons and practice as he works to hone his ballet skill.

"It was a real challenge getting started," Meeker ("Twinkletoes" to his friends in the artsie circle) recalled in a recent interview. "It was hard to find tutus and slippers in my size. But I was determined to persevere.

"To me, the ballet is a piercing call to my very soul which I cannot ignore," Meeker added pensively. "Sure, my academic studies have been important, and even the ECSU Presidency was okay. But what I've longed to do from the bottom of my heart is pursue the dance full-time."

"This award was like a dream come true. I now have the confidence to quit university and devote myself to what I really want to do. I know it's what I was meant for."

Meeker will be leaving Erindale in the immediate future and transferring to Juilliard, where he has been accepted on scholarship. "It's an artist's life for me," Meeker commented.

Luckily for Meeker, this shift in career has been extremely timely. As his term at ECSU comes to an end, he has found an equally demanding pursuit to which to direct his skills. Some say, however, that his term had ended long ago and that Bart Arsenault, President Acclaimed for next year, has taken over early.

Perry "Twinkletoes" Meeker is the recipient of a top ballet award.

Pub-goer wants to know how to say no

Miss Manners

Is there something else I could tell him when I want to turn him down?

— Drinker But Not A Dancer

Dear Drinker:

Miss Manners believes that a girl is completely entitled to turn down a gentleman's offer of a dance without making up an excuse. A simple "No, thank you," should be sufficient. If he persists, make sure you run over him when you make that run for last call; Miss Manners promises that this will discourage him.

Dear Miss Manners:

What is the proper response when somebody in one of your lectures comes up to you two days before the big test and says, "I missed twenty-nine classes last semester. Can I borrow your notebook?"

— Sick Of It

Dear Sick:

Try this response, which should prove to be both effective and profitable: "For eighty bucks, I'll even throw in the textbook!"

Dear Miss Manners:

I have recently started going out with this really terrific guy. I'm almost sure that I'm in love with him — he's just about perfect.

The only problem is that he's my first boyfriend and I'm not really sure how I should be treated. He tells me that I should be carrying his books, doing his homework, cleaning his apartment, cooking his food, and paying for him every time we go out on dates.

Please tell me, Miss Manners, is this proper behaviour between a boyfriend and girlfriend?

— Unsure

Dear Unsure:

Miss Manners believes that you are "being taken", as they say. But any girl who is stupid enough to stick with a guy like that deserves to be treated like a doormat.

Dear Miss Manners:

I live in residence and recently there have been a lot of elections at my school. Is it bad manners to slam the door in someone's face when they come around campaigning?

— Bored of Speeches

Dear Bored:

Only if you honestly care about what the candidate has to say.

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles an instant hit

by Janus Junkie
Erindale Enquirer Movie Critic

A brilliant new film is on the scene in the form of young, nimble, irresistible reptiles. Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles has already grossed over $75 billion in its opening week; line-ups to see the movie have reached as long as twenty-six blocks long, and tickets scalpers have been known to make as much as $700 for a single theatre pass.

Why this instant success? Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles displays a powerful and moving combination of comedy, drama and horror. The directing is genius and the acting sensational.

Already it is expected to be marked down as the "movie of the decade", easily surpassing in quality such first-rate screen presentations as Ghandi.

"I laughed; I cried. It became a part of me," well-known movie critic Siskel was reported to have said.

"I loved it; it was much better than Cats. I want to see it again and again," added his famous cohort Ebert. "Two thumbs up for Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles."

HORROR SCOPE for Tuesday

Aries (March 21-April 19): Investments made today might be to your advantage (your tutorial leader can be bought off before he records your grade on the Psychology test).

Taurus (April 20-May 20): This is a good time to let your friends know how much they mean to you (it's time to suck up because your birthday is coming soon).

Gemini (May 21-June 21): Your home life improves drastically (Mom and Dad finally get a remote control for the TV).

Cancer (June 22-July 22): A member of the opposite sex is magnetically drawn to you (your big brother/sister wants to borrow twenty dollars again).

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Teamwork proves to be crucial today (two of your buddies distract the professor while you manage to sneak a look at the final exam).

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your evening consists of gourmet cooking and fine dining (you discover an extra box of Hamburger Helper in the back of the cupboard).

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): Your finances appear stable (your Rez payment cheque didn't bounce).

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21): Some important social contacts could be made today (you are introduced to the son of the general manager of the local Brewers Retail stores).

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An opportunity to further your education comes your way today; (you discover where your brother's been hiding his Penthouse magazines).

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your evening consists of social activity (it's two-for-one night at the pub).

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A respected person in authority gives you valuable advice (your father tells you to go to Hell when you ask for the car keys).

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Big advancements are made in your career (the manager at McDonald's starts letting you handle the drive-thru orders).

Academy Awards for fine acting

by Betty Ford

The 1990 Academy Award winners for professional acting have been announced at last, and the winners of the awards have been most worthy of them; the results have not been surprising, however, as predictions proved true.

The Best Actors award was presented to the Campus Police, who have made an impressive effort to make it seem as though they are an effective security force at Erindale. They beat out the second nominees, The Administration, by only a margin, who were recognized for their fine appearance of doing something at all times despite common knowledge that they do nothing at all.

The Best Actress award went to SAC Vice-President Kristen Honey, for pretending to give a damn about Erindale. Runner-up Maura Crowther was only mildly distressed at not winning after being nominated for her long time performance as a card holding feminist.

The Best Supporting Cast was awarded to the rest of the Students Administrative Council, who have pretended to represent Erindale's best interests and have convinced us they could handle our money efficiently. This year's ECSU members didn't make enough of an impression to be nominated. Maybe next year!

The Best Actor award was given to medium II Editor-in-Chief Norman B. Saunders, who has made an impressive performance pretending to have both ethics and spelling skills.

CFRE Radio Erindale ended the night by winning Best Continuing Performance award; for the fifteenth year running they have been pretending to be a real radio station that's "worth watching".

We will look forward to next year's awards, whose recipients should prove equally deserving.

Phase V should party hearty!

Ann
Landers

Dear Ann: I live in the new Phase Five residences at Erindale. Recently I heard that some parents who live in this housing area wish to make it a safe place to raise their young children. I'm very upset and frustrated at their efforts, as I enjoy smashing beer bottles over my head at three o'clock in the morning while singing "Erindale Once, Erindale Twice" at the top of my lungs. I am afraid that I will be asked to terminate this habit. Do you have any advice?

— Big Partyer.

Dear Big: I do not foresee any problem with your nocturnal activity. Dr. Spock recommends that children are bombarded with as much stimuli as possible during their early years so as to enrich their intellectual development. Phase V parents should be thanking you.

Dear Ann: I recently heard that eating too much Kraft Dinner can decrease one's interest in academics while simultaneously increasing one's alcohol tolerance. Are these phenomena related?

— Starving Student

Dear Starving: I'm not sure if that's true but I wouldn't worry about it if I were you. It has been statistically proven that without students, the macaroni and cheese companies would go under, and then what would you serve when you have dinner guests and you want to go all out?

Dear Ann: I work with a great bunch of guys who keep leaving the toilet seat up in the bathroom. The last time I wrote a letter to a newspaper complaining about it, a lot of feminists came to my aid and supported my "oppression in the workplace". I'm not sure I understand them. Am I really being oppressed because I get my bum wet every time I go in the bathroom without turning on the lights?

— Lana Ains

Dear Lana: This is not oppression; this is stupidity. Why don't you turn on the lights first?

Rez Director cuts first record

by Coconut Joe

Erindale College's Director of Residence and Housing, Mike Lavelle, has finally accomplished something that he has dreamed of for years: Lavelle recently cut his first record album with Island Records.

On this album, Lavelle proves to be quite multi-talented, as he not only sings the lead vocals but also accompanies himself on the ukelele, the harp, the accordion, and some backup vocals.

Lavelle has been touring retirement homes for years performing his music but it was not until last year that he was approached and asked if he had ever considered doing a record. The person making inquiries was Harold Flabbergast, a well-reputed music producer.

"I was visiting my grandmother in the home when I saw him perform," Flabbergast said. "I know talent when I hear it. I immediately asked Mike if he wanted me to work with him on this. I knew that if I didn't Lavelle's easy listening musical style appeals to every generation. snatched him up, someone else would."

Lavelle has little to say now that the record is topping easy listening charts. "I knew I'd get famous someday," he commented. "It was either this or build Ontario's largest skyscraper on Erindale campus."

Lavelle will be beginning a world tour shortly.

Sports writers win Nobel Peace Prize for literature

The sports writers of Erindale have won the Nobel Peace Prize for literature in a closed ballot in Helsinki, Finland.

Great section

Over two hundred and twenty intellectuals representing every country took only three hours to decide the winner.

The prize came as a surprise to medium II's sports editor Darrin Griffiths, who said in his acceptance speech: "The section began as a confabulation of gradational reanimation despite indefatigable and excursus caricatures depicting augmentations of facts."

Standing ovation

After that speech the crowd rose to its feet and gave the group of Erindale writers a much deserved standing ovation.

The intellectuals of the world, not known for their support of Erindale athletics, could not help but concede that despite the trashy display of tabloidism that gets printed each week there is still some validity in the sports section.

Drinking team

The group of writers is perhaps the greatest drinking team in the history of this section.

"Unbelievable," said a jubilant Norm Saunders, "every Friday, when the ball hockey review is written, the writers are so drunk that the waitress ends up writing the column. In fact, every Friday afternoon has been nicknamed, 'Drink yourself into oblivion with the sports section'."

A monstrosity

"The section is a monstrosity," proclaimed a large group of anti-sports section protesters situated outside the place of voting, "these people are evil and they cannot even spell the nicknames correctly."

Fuck you

The sports section's writers responded to the group's chanting by chanting, "Fuck you," to which the group of protesters took note and handed in a group essay.

The writers were collectively in favour of boycotting all Botswanian products after learning that the only vote against them came from this nation.

Cooler heads prevailed however when it was learned that next year the annual nude pygmy mud wrestling tournament was to be held in Botswana, and strong coverage of the even could produce a second Nobel prize for this talented bunch.

"It was the use of nicknames that won the section the honours," said one voter, "who else but staff writer Peter Lemoine could call someone that Rick Guy?"

Bach and MacBeth

"When Bach wrote MacBeth the critics laughed, when Einstein ran the four-minute mile they laughed, when Dickens sang New York-New York - they laughed, when TSN did their sportscasts - they laughed, when Marina told Darrin that the Timberwolves would win - he laughed, when Dustin Hoffman portrayed Willie Lowman - they laughed, when Mark Cassar played defence - they laughed, when the Leafs took to the ice - they laughed, when Terry McPhee refereed - they laughed," said Norm Saunders, unable to clarify what he was talking about.

"I'd like to thank all the little people who made this possible and of course my dog, Rex, for all the moral support," said the unknown writer, Jean-Guy Rabbabeau.

Potential is vague

"I hate this section," screamed a family member who used to have a subscription to the paper until the section began printing obscenities and stereo ads. "The section has potential," added the uncle of the first protester's daughter-in-law's second cousin's niece of the second uncle, "but what good is potential when the section sucks?"

"Potential is a vague term," rebutted Griffiths, "and it is a term which applies to this section because the section is vague as is the word itself especially when applied to a like term in the analogous sense that the word is itself vague - is that clear?"

"There is doubt in my mind that this group of writers pulled off the greatest upset since Finland defeated the Soviet Union to win the gold medal in hockey at Lake Placid," remarked ball hockey staff writer John Kajin.

The Republicans

Kajin later added, "Half of us cannot write, none of us read anything but the boxscores in the sports section. None of us know who is in power politically in this country except for Dave Cassar who came the closest with his answer of 'The Republicans', and since it was the closest to the real answer we made Dave our political advisor during our stay in Finland."

Group Moon

The rest of the world media seemed jealous and were refusing to cover the story until medium II associate sports editor and fashion co-ordinator Marina Colautti, decided that a group "moon" was needed.

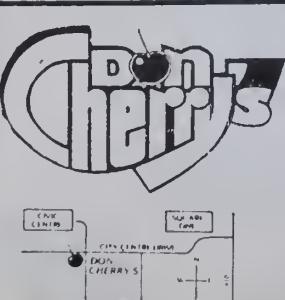

The resulting pandemonium sent shock waves all the way to Milton. "I'm just happy to be here," said a contented Steve Viau.

Men's basketball team wins finals

by J. Swish

The 89-90 edition of Erindale's Division II basketball team was virtually unstoppable this season. The team was backed by a strong core of returning players as well as a few new solid acquisitions.

The "Shooters" outscored their opponents by 333 points, an average of 18.5 per game. Erindale easily captured the league title with an 12-1-1 record.

Finishing first in league play enabled Erindale to face the eighth place MBA team in the opening playoff round.

Erindale dominated the game from the tipoff and went on to beat the weaker MBA squad 61-45.

The next stop on the road to the championship was downtown against Dentistry in a two-game total point series.

The much improved Dentistry team appeared to catch the "Shooters" offguard as Erindale was able to establish a slim three point half-time lead.

Erindale's press caused many turnovers which led to easy baskets. They outscored Dentistry by nineteen in the second half to take a twenty-two point lead in the series.

The second game against Dentistry was held at Erindale in front of at least five fans.

Erindale was already ahead of the Dents by twenty-two and could therefore afford to lose, but not by more than twenty-one.

With this on their minds, Er-

The team had an outstanding season and, with all the players returning, the team should dominate the league again next year.

indale came out flat. At halftime Erindale trailed 22-18.

Halftime excuses ranged from speeches, haircuts, essays, to a overstrenuous practice the day before.

Player/coach Jack Krist admitted that he did run a tough practice but added that it was only the second practice of the year.

After deciding that they had better not disappoint the most fans they have seen all season, Erindale came out and won the game 47-42 and thus advanced to the finals with a plus twenty-seven point total.

The final two featured Erindale and their crosstown rivals, Scarborough. The first game of the series was held at Erindale.

The first half was scarily close as the two teams traded baskets and a few familiar adjectives, none of which can be printed here. Erindale held a slim 22-19 lead at halftime. The "Shooters" started the second half on fire. They hit ten straight points before Scarborough knew what had happened.

The lead was never in doubt from this point on. A devastating press and a solid defensive effort in the second half was the key to success. All the Erindale players played well as they held Scarborough to only nine second half points, while scoring twenty-three to win the game 45-28.

Needing just one more victory to clinch the championship, Erindale headed east to Scarborough. With the championship within their grasp, Erindale made no mistakes and played an almost perfect game.

The "Shooters" scored the game's first eight points and never trailed from that point on.

Offensively they were unstoppable with a strong inside game accompanied with good outside shooting.

Erindale won the game 51-31 and captured the Men's Division II Basketball Championship.

Coach Jack Krist would like to commend all the Erindale players from their tremendous efforts in making this a winning season. Next year's season looks promising as all members will be returning, provided they survive the "Shooters" party.

The 1989-1990 Championship team consisted of Bart Arsenault, Paul Bhatti, Jack Krist, Mark McDavid, Mark Deller, Mark Bulut, Steve Bulut, Ivan Madzounian, and Ernie Schroeder.
